

Hooded Warbler

Wilsonia citrina

About this Bird

Hooded Warblers are olive-green above and yellow below. The male can be recognized by the striking black hood surrounding its bright yellow face. Females may show a faint hood but others are plainer. In the summer these birds prefer thick forests where they look for insects and spiders on the ground. In the winter they can be found in a wide range of woods, mangroves and forests. Hooded Warblers often fan their tails out, showing off white feathers that are usually hidden. Bird Size 13 cm, 5.25 in.
